Highlights in the Foreign Exchange Market:

- US equities' performance was solid on Monday supported by healthy corporate earnings and a rally in the tech sector. All three major indices closed in the green zone with the Nasdag moving higher for the fifth consecutive session. In Asia, stock markets were mostly elevated after US stocks were near record territory.
- As for the British pound, the currency struggled this week as BOE Governor Mark Carney warned that a no-deal Brexit is becoming highly likely, while doubts in regards to Prime Minister Theresa May's leadership continues to weigh heavy on the currency. This week, the UK Trade Minister further increased pressure on the Pound, stating there is now a 60-40 chance that a deal won't be met before the March 2019 deadline, dropping the Pound to an 11-month low of 1.2923.
- The Turkish lira reversed its losses slightly today versus the Dollar after depreciating to its weakest level in history. The government's attempt to strength the lira failed to boost investors' confidence. The TRY rose 1.3% to 5.26, aiding the currency back from 5.4253, its lowest level on record. The Turkish lira has lost nearly 28% of its value to the US dollar since the start of the year.
- Looking at sanctions, the first phase of sanctions on Iran will be implemented today prohibiting Iran from using the Dollar as a median of exchange. The sanctions also restrict Iran from trading in vehicles, metals and minerals (gold, steel, coal and aluminum). The country will also be banned from buying US and European aircraft. The second phase of the sanctions will be imposed in November, targeting Iranian oil production. The Iranian rial has sunk more than 50% against the US dollar this year.
